Helping Artists to Sell Their Art and Make Money

Registering your Domain Name

First things first, you need a domain name for your website.

If you don't already have a domain name, get one. It should be your business name, and a dot-com, if possible. If you're an artist doing business in your own name, the domain name should match your name. This is important.

If your name is John Doe and you can't get "JohnDoe.com", many people get a hyphenated name (John-Doe.com) or add a middle initial (JohnEDoe.com) or a qualifying word (JohnDoeArtist.com).

With a little imagination you should be able to come up with something both suitable and brandable if the obvious choice is not available.

There are many good, inexpensive domain name registrars. Important: Be sure that they are ICANN accredited. One of the most popular domain name registrars' and one that I use and can recommend is Godaddy .

Insert your chosen domain name and Godaddy will search for the domain availability. If not available, then you will have to choose another version as advised above until you find one that is available. Click on "Add and Proceed to Checkout and follow the instructions to register your domain. Godaddy will charge about $10 to register your domain name for one year.

Be careful to choose the right period that you would want your domain registration to be for. I would suggest 1 year to start with. Godaddy will have a default of 5 years so if you want a period less than 5 years, make the choice using the drop down arrow as shown in the screenshot below.

You can ignore all the rest of the choices that Godaddy will give you and click on "No Thanks, I am ready to checkout"
